INTRODUCTION.

While I was engaged upon this work some ten years ago, I was told that Elisha Philbrook had made an extensive collection of records of the family for publication. I immediately addressed a letter to him; but he had removed from his former residence in Wisconsin, and for years I could hear nothing of him. When I was preparing a sketch of the first four generations, for the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, July, 1884, I learned that he was living and had resumed his work upon the genealogy. I at once proposed to him that we unite our collections and publish them together, to which he agreed. I sent my manuscript to him, to be returned with such additions and corrections, as he might be able to make; but he did not return it; and it seems he died in a few months. So I was obliged to go over the ground again. Since his death, by the persevering efforts of Mrs. Clara Philbrick and her family, of Salem, Mass., most of his genealogical writings which could be found, have been placed in my hands, and I have learned how much expense I should have saved, if I could have had the same seven years earlier. He deserved much credit for his patient and laborious efforts to perpetuate the memory of our ancestors. Though want of funds prevented him from completing and printing his records, he succeeded in waking some of the family to an interest in the subject which I hope may long continue. In the Appendix to this volume, there is a brief sketch of his life and labors, by one who is able to appreciate the value of his work. [See Note A Appendix.]

The most of his important records were already on my pages. They are, however, of value, as confirming the correctness of the information I had collected, and have aided me in correcting dates &c. The passages in this work, copied from his manuscript are included in brackets, [ ], and followed by the letters, E. P., his initials.

If any one asks why I have been willing, without any pecuniary return, to expend so much labor and money upon this work, I will refer him to the words of another, the President of the Genealogical Society, which very correctly express my own feelings.

"To know nothing of our ancestry, or whence we came, to have no reverence for the precious memories of the past, nor interest in those who are to succeed us in the battle of life, is to ignore the elements and influences that have made us what we are, and to repudiate the natural instincts and affections of the human heart, — to suppress the aspirations and hopes of a soul that is to come on through the endless ages of eternity.

"What more precious testimonials of your love of kindred and home can you leave than that which provides for the transmission of the history of your ancestors, yourself and family to future generations. This is a trust that Providence has confided to your care; and who, so dead to sympathy and affection, to kindred and to country, that would not preserve the records of his ancestors, the place of his birth, the home of his childhood, and the sacred spot where repose the loved and lost ones of Earth?" — Hon. Marshal P. Wilder's address at the annual meeting of the Society in 1884.

In closing, I must express my obligations to Mrs. H. A. Godfrey, of Hampton Falls, to Mrs. Clara Philbrick and daughters, of Salem, Mass., to whom I am deeply indebted; also to Andrew J. Philbrick, Esq., of Danville; Wm. S. Philbrook, Boston; Hon. J. D Philbrick, Andover, N. H.; Francis T. Philbrook, Geneseo, Ill.; H. J. Philbrick, Kittery, Me.; and especially to Rev. M. T. Runnells, in his "History of Sanbornton, N. H." James W. Cox, of Oakland, Cal., and many others have aided, whose names appear in the body of the work.

JACOB CHAPMAN.

NOTE.

There has been a difference of opinion respecting the year that Thomas P[1]. removed from England to America. An old record in a family Bible of Capt. Jonth.[5], grandson of William[3], says, "He came fr. England in one of the transports [for settlers] in 1633." The descendants of this branch of the family seem confident that this record is correct.

But on the other hand, JONATHAN[3] of Hampton, who was ten years old when his grandfather, THOMAS[1] the emigrant died there, says that his father, THOMAS PHILBRICK. JR., was b. in England in the year 1624, and was six years old when he was brought over the ocean to the American shore. ABNER of the 5th generation, b. 1708, who lived with his great uncle Jonathan 20 years, and was heir to half of his estate, was a teacher well educated for the times. He made a record of these statements which that branch of the family receive with confidence. Thomas[2], who crossed the sea, at six years of age, died only eight years before the birth of Abner, and most of his eight children were then living, and some of them probably had records of their father's birth and of his age when he came to our shores, so that Abner could easily ascertain the facts, before putting them in writing.

Again, if Thomas Philbrick was a shipmaster, he may have crossed the ocean many times, and the removal of the eight members of his family may have been some at one time and others at another time. We know he was at Watertown in 1636, and Bond may be correct in the supposition that "he was of that company that came over in 1630"; and that most of his seven children were born in England, and some of them may have been of age when they left England.

EXPLANATIONS.

1. Names of Towns in New Hampshire omit the initials of the State.

2. When several children are b. in one town, the name of the town is given with the first, and not repeated with the name of each child.

3. Dates before 1752 are in old style; and when double dates are given, from January 1st to March 25th, I use the last figure to indicate the Historical in preference to the Civil and Ecclesiastical year, which began March 25th. When during that period only one date is found, the year is uncertain, and hence we may find, in different records a different year is named.

4. Abbreviations. Abt., about; ae., aged; b. born; bapt., baptised; ch., children; d., died; dau., daughter; m., married; unm., unmarried; rem., removed; res., residence or resided; s., son; w., wife; s. p., (sine prole) without issue.

5. The small index figure at the right of a name denotes the generation of the person, dating from the emigrant, Thomas[1].

6. The families are numbered in order, and large figures at the left of a name refer to the number of the family on pages following.

7. The children of a family are numbered by Roman capitals, I, II, III, &c. These numbers are not always in the order of their birth.

The grand children are numbered by Arabic figures, 1, 2, 3, &c.

The great grand children by figures as 1), 2), 3), &c.

8. The names of children that died young are often omitted in the Index.

9. A passage enclosed in brackets [ ] followed by an interrogation point (?) indicates that the words are doubtful.

In spelling I usually follow the briefest and latest form, spelling those among the earlier generations as I suppose they wrote their own names.

10. Many families would have received more extensive notice if I had received their records in season. By abridging and condensing, I have been able to put upon my crowded pages many records which would otherwise have been left out.

Philbrick and Philbrook Families.

THOMAS PHILBRICK,* or PHILBROOK is supposed to have come from England in 1630, or not much later, and settled in Watertown, Mass. He is said to have been a mariner in early life, and to have been master of a vessel before he emigrated from Lincolnshire in England. There is no doubt that he and his family were settled in Watertown in 1636. Bond says "His homestead was on the N. W. corner of Belmont and Lexington Streets. Probably he was of that company that came over in 1630."—History of Watertown, p. 909.

In 1639, the second summer after the settlement of Hampton, N. H., JOHN (son of Thomas) PHILBRICK moved to Hampton, and his younger brother, Thomas, soon followed him. We are told that "The first settlers of Hampton were attracted to the place by the fishing, the fowling, the best of clams, and the salt marshes, almost ready for the scythe."

In 1645–6, Thomas Philbrick, Sen., a grantee of eight lots, sold his estate in Watertown to Isaac Stearns, and in 1650 or '51 he had removed to Hampton, where his elder sons lived. In 1661 he bought of John Moulton, land joining the farms of his son James and his son in law, John Cass. His wife, Elizabeth, died, 12 mo. 19, 1663, and in March, 1664, when he made his will, he calls himself "very aged." He d. in 1667.

* I think no autograph of Thomas the emigrant is to be found, nor copy of his signature. In the early records I find the name spelled in various forms, Filbrick, Philbrook, Philbrucke, Philbrok, &c., &c.

In 1671, he had a grant of lot 52, 40 acres in the south of Hampton, called "The new plantation" (now Seabrook). He was drowned in the Hampton River, near the mouth of Cole's Creek, 16 Nov. 1674. Though a majority of the family now spell their names "Philbrick," for 200 years or more, many of them have spelled their names "Philbrook," as it has been generally pronounced. I endeavor to follow the forms I find in the records sent me. In the Province Rate of Hampton in 1680, I find the names of Jeames and Samuel spelled "Philbrick," but of Thomas and Jonathan, "Philbrook. A rate in 1682–3 spells all the names "Philbricke, another in 1682 spells all of them "Philbrook." In 1693 Thomas, 11, [illegible]tman, writes his name "Philbrick." On 2 March, 1693–4 in "a birth. [illegible] and &c.," Samuel, Thomas and Jonathan all spell their names [illegible] The grand children [illegible] Thomas, testifying to the settlement of his brother [illegible] copie of a bo[illegible] children by hig[illegible] "Philbrook"; but at some other times he "Philbrook." In 168[illegible] dent that the name was usually pro- John's estate, signs his name [illegible] died [illegible] the grand children of the signs it "Philbrick." It seems evid[illegible] nounced "Philbrook"; and quite a number o[illegible] they were pronounced. Emigrant, Thomas[1], always spelled their names as they [illegible] The sons of Thomas[3], an original proprietor and settler of Kingstown, usually spelled their names "Philbrick," but in 1720 Jedediah, one of the ablest and most intelligent of the family signed his name "Philbrook."

There was a Robert Philbrick in Ipswich in 1639. "Robert Filbrick had 8 acres granted him for services as soldier against the Pequot Indians." 1643 Dec. 4, "It is agreed that each soldier, for their services to the Indians shall be allowed 12*d*. a day (allowing for the Lord's day) in respect of the extremity of the weather, and the officers double Robert Philbrick received three shillings." "He subscribed, in 1648, to Col. Dennison's compensation. We find in 1658, April 13, John Philbrick, dec'd and inventory taken by William Fiveield and Moses Cox."—Hammett Papers, No. III. p. 109.

I can find no account of his origin or of his posterity, and suppose he has no descendants.

lot of five acres was granted to him in 1640. On the 20th, 8th Mo., 1657, he was drowned with his wife and daughter, Sarah, and five others. They were in a little sloop, on a shopping excursion to Boston by the easiest route.

Hampton records say: "The sad hand of God upon eight persons, going in a vessel by sea, from Hampton to Boston, who were all swallowed up in the Osian, soon after they went out the harbor." Among the names recorded are "John Philbrick and Ann his wife, and Sarah their daughter, — all drowned, 20th, 8th Mo., 1657."

NOTE. It was about the year 1744 that Job Philbrook, 15 years old, and an Irish boy named Mahony, were plowing at some distance from home when the Indians, coming between them and the house, took them prisoners and led them to Canada, where he was held some years.

After he was married, and had a large family of little ones to provide for, he was called away from home on business and detained longer than he intended; the provisions in the house fell short. The mother, instead of sitting down and crying with the hungry children, determined to hunt for food. Taking a hand sled with guns, amunition &c., she started with the oldest boy, Jere., fourteen years old, over the ice and snow in search of some animal food so much needed for the children. As Providence ordered, they had travelled only about four miles when they came in sight of a moose; they shot it, bled it, and being unable to remove the whole body, they cut off flesh enough to feed the children a few days and returned. The next day her husband and his Indian man returned, and had little difficulty in bringing home the rest of the venison.

* There is a tradition, well attested, that William Philbrook[6] (Wm.[5] Jonth.[4], Wm.[3]), called "Big William," was a large and powerful man, and his brother, Captain Joseph, though not equal to him in size, was a man of great muscular strength. During the War of 1812, the vessel in which they were sailing was taken by a British cruiser. The American crew were confined in the hold, and a British crew were put on board. The prize was headed for Castine, Me., then held by the English. While on the way to this port, the prize crew had retired to the cabin for rest. Before they were aware of it, the Yankees in the hold had got loose and gone up to the deck, knocked down the steersman and secured him, and were rushing to the companionway to meet their captors, coming up to engage in the fight upon deck. When the first man coming up from the cabin ran up the muzzle of his gun, Philbrook caught it and bent the barrel nearly double. The entrance was barred down, and the captors were imprisoned. The course of the vessel was once more changed, and it safely landed in a patriot port, where the prize crew of British prisoners was delivered to the authorities.

REMARKS.

I would gladly have included the records of Capt. Jn. J. Philbrook of Ipswich (descended from the family in Vinalhaven) and of a hundred others, if they had been furnished me. But I cannot manufacture any records. I can only copy and publish such as are given me. If the records sent me are incorrect, I do not often have any means of detecting the errors. It is not strange that records of a family, by different persons sometimes disagree, and it is impossible for me to decide which is correct. Persons finding errors in these pages are requested to send me the corrections, that they may be printed in a supplement, if one is ever called for. I will also carefully preserve for the same purpose any additions which may be sent to me.

APPENDIX.

ELISHA PHILBROOK[7] (Jere.[6], Job.[5], Jonth.[4], Wm.[3], Thos.[2]), 1802–1883, teacher, surveyor and genealogist, was the twelfth child of Jeremiah and his wife Sarah, b. in Vinalhaven, Waldo Co., Me., 6 Oct., 1802. His youth was spent on the farm and in the fisheries summers, and in the district school winters. At the age of 18 he entered Buckfield Academy, and at 19 commenced teaching, which became his occupation most of the time for fifty years. During the first few years, when not teaching, he devoted much time to study, giving some attention to the study of Latin, but more to mathematics, natural philosophy, and at length he became greatly interested in phonography and the reform of spelling. In 1833 he visited the West, teaching in Ohio and in Kentucky. After nearly four years, he returned to his native place, and joined his old friends in their fishing voyages, teaching some at other seasons. Early in the winter of 1838–9, having bid farewell to the friends of his youth, he set sail for the South, intending to go via New York, but the vessel was driven to sea by a storm, and he landed at Charleston, S. C. From this place he sailed in a packet to New Orleans, whence he proceeded by steamboat to Vicksburg, Miss. In this vicinity he made his home, teaching for 16 years, sometimes in Arkansas. During his summer vacations he visited the Northwestern States several times, and in 1855 removed to Wisconsin, where his brother William and other relatives had settled. In 1879 he was secretary of the Wisconsin Phonetic Association.

In 1873 he published "A Scheme for a Revised Spelling of the English Language" &c. In 1878 he was a member of the American Metric Bureau. Several times he was tempted to engage in other occupations, but soon turned back to his old business of teaching. From 1877 to 1879 he was a clerk of the District in Knowlton, Wis., where he owned lands. It seems he did not commence his genealogical studies till about 1850. After 15 years of labor in this field, he for a while suspended work in discouragement, but resumed it again a few years before his death. He collected records for a Genealogy of the Vaughan Family that settled in Providence, R. I., and was preserving materials for a History of Marathon Co., Wis.

In 1820, at the age of 18, he with his brother Ezekiel, joined the Methodist church in their native place. In Dec., 1857, he was a member of the Baptist Church of Oxford, Marquette Co., Wisconsin. He d. at Mosinee, Marathon Co., Wis., 1 Nov., 1883, ae. 81. Of the particulars of his last days I have not been informed. C. P.

By the persevering efforts of William S. Philbrook of Boston, a portrait of Elisha Philbrook has been obtained for this volume which will be highly valued, especially by his numerous relatives.

NOTE B. [SEE PAGE 57.]

HON. JOSEPH (son of Samuel and Phebe Sanborn) PHILBRICK, b. at Seabrook, 1772, was a man of more than ordinary ability and education, combined with sound judgment, sterling integrity and decision of character. At the age of 19 he commenced teaching in Jaffrey, N. H., and continued the business in other towns of the vicinity. Having inherited the homestead of his father in Weare, he was for years officially connected with the schools of the town where he resided. He was appointed sergeant major of the Ninth Regt., N. H. Militia, in 1801, and in 1807, adjutant, but in 1808 retired from military service. He was in 1807 justice of the peace for Hillsboro' County, and in 1818 justice of the peace and quorum, which office he held till his death. In 1820, he was commissioned associate justice of the Court of Sessions for the County and also attended to much business in the Superior and in the Probate Courts. In 1828 he was master of the "Masonic Golden Rule Lodge in Weare, N. H."

And last but not least, he was a Christian, manifesting in his daily life the power of his faith, being an active member of the Free Will Baptist Church, and officiating as clerk, during the last twelve years of his life. He was also for 15 years clerk of the Weare Quarterly meeting. COM.

When a small child his parents removed to Maine, and he was brought up by his maternal grandfather, Rev. Habijah Weld of Attleboro', Mass. He entered Harvard college about 1775, but in 1776, the class was broken up to enlist in the army of the Revolution. He enlisted in a Connecticut regiment, and was in the campaign at Ticonderoga. In the spring of 1779, he entered on board the sloop Providence, which was one of the fleet destined for the reduction of the British Forces upon the Penobscot river. The fleet sent upon the disastrous expedition, was commanded by Commodore Dudley Saltonstall, and consisted of two continental vessels, the Warren, 32 guns, and the Providence, 12 guns, and 17 other vessels, carrying in all 324 guns, and manned by more than 2000 men. All these vessels were taken, or driven ashore or blown up. The crew of the Providence escaped to the woods and when nearly starved, some of them came out at a farm house, where the good woman pitying them, hung on the big pot with pork and beans of which she supposed she had enough to feed the company. While the beans were cooking, some one came into the room and called her Mrs. Philbrook. One of the soldiers said to her "Why there is a young man of our company, back of us, of that name, "Philbrook." She asked "Is his name Tommy?" "Yes," was the answer. The mother's heart was more deeply moved, and she said to herself, "He is starving. and must be delicately fed; a chicken must be killed." Immediately came the thought "These soldiers are all somebodies' sons;" and many of her chickens were killed, and the hungry men made welcome at her table. Soon the second detachment appeared, and sure enough Tommy with them emerged from the forest upon his own father's farm. In four months he had returned to Boston, and early in 1780 he joined, as quartermaster, a Massachusetts regiment under Col. Mitchell of Norton. At one period of the war he was for eight months confined in the Jersey prison ship. During most of this time the prisoners' only food was "wormy bread and stinking water." He would sometimes find a dead man each side of him when waked in the light of the morning. With two others he once escaped upon the ice, through a hole cut with a jack knife, but two of them were retaken, he was put in irons that were two small for him, and the scars left by the wounds they made he carried to his grave. By the kindness of his guard he was released, taking the place of a Hartford man whose name was on a cartel for exchange of prisoners, but who died before it came.

After the war Captain Philbrook resided at Providence, R. I., and engaged as a partner in business, but lost all his property through the villainy of his partner, who absconded taking all the funds and most valuable goods. He gave up everything left to his creditors, and they released him upon the pledge of his word that if he prospered he would pay them in full. So he was not imprisoned, as he might have been, for debt, but went to Maine, having received a deed of wild land in Bath. He commenced clearing it, but the land was recalled. He then opened a school in the vicinity which gave him a living, but would not furnish funds to pay his debts. His wife, anxious to aid him and to support the children, opened a school in Providence, and he went to sea as supercargo for years, and at last succeeded in paying his creditors, principal and interest. He continued his voyages at sea hoping to secure the means to retire, and release his wife from the labors of the school, but success no longer followed him. One disaster came after another. He was shipwrecked several times, and returned at last broken down in health and unfit for business. His wife had commenced teaching as a temporary effort to relieve her husband's pecuniary distress, but owing to his later misfortune she continued it forty-two years, till she was seventy years old. She spent the last 22 years of her life in the quiet of her family, and died at the age of 92.

NOTE D. [SEE NO. 102, III, PAGE 117].

JOSEPH A. PHILBROOK[8] of Hampton has the Old Black Letter Bible, printed in London, A. D 1583. The tradition is that "A Captain Philbrook, was with his ship captured by a French war vessel. By his skill in pilotage he afterwards saved both vessels from shipwreck, and in return his liberty and his vessel were restored to him. While on board the man-of-war, this ancient Bible, previously captured from some English ship, was during a storm brought on deck to be cast overboard, perhaps as a Jonah. Captain Philbrick begged it for himself, and took it to London, and had it rebound, and brought it to this country. It weighs twenty-seven pounds, and still retains the worn brass knobs on which the open covers used to rest. It contains an address to Queen Elizabeth, and the following prayer;

"O gracious God, and Most Merciful Father, which has vouchsafed us the rich and precious jewell of thy Holy Word, Assist us with thy spirit, that it may be written on our hearts, to our everlasting comfort, to reform us, to renew us, according to thine own image, to build us up and Edifie us, into the perfect building of thy Christ, sanctifying and encreasing in us all heavenly vertues. Grant this O heavenly Father, for Jesus Christ's sake. Amen." [J. W. C., Portland, 1 Dec., 1862].

This large volume, over 300 years old, was printed in London, by permission of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, in the year 1583, the twenty-fifth year of her reign. In January, 1692–3, it was the property of William Bray. Of course it was more than one hundred years old when it was taken to sea, and providentially saved and preserved to continue for centuries, telling "the old old story." The type is still clear, the paper good and, though much worn at the corners, the main part of it may continue legible for five hundred years to come.

REMARK. — No one should conclude from the fact that Walter Philbrook signed his will by a mark that he was too ignorant to read and write. When he was in business and in health he could write his name without trouble in signing the deeds and other papers which he made. Many an aged man, and many men afflicted by different diseases, lose the use of their fingers years before they lose their reason. In early times it seems to have been a custom for men in official stations, especially in ecclesiastical offices, to sign public documents by a cross, while the notary affixed their names written in full; and such a signature may have been taken as a sort of oath, exhibiting more solemnity than a mere name written with a trembling hand.

SOME CHARACTERISTICS OF THE EARLY PHILBRICKS.

Those who have devoted much time to the history of families among the early settlers of New England, must have noticed how many families were for generations distinguished by peculiar traits of character. The early Philbricks were no exception to this rule.

Thomas[1], the emigrant, was said to have been a shipmaster in the old country. His children settled near the ocean and not a few of them were drowned in it, passing by water into the future state. A natural affection for the sea, appeared among his descendants for generations. The young men took to the water as young ducks take to the stream, and seemed never more happy than in their "Home on the rolling wave." In the course of time numbers of them bought farms, and retired to quiet homes, but they often chose their homes near to some body of water. Others were unable to quit the sea till age or infirmity compelled them.

I find many in the later generations who have been mariners and masters of vessels. The title "Captain" prefixed in this volume to many a name indicates more frequently a sea captain.

Though this family in early days furnished a large number of earnest, intelligent, Christian men, it is remarkable that no more of them acquired a liberal education. I find few of their names upon our college catalogues, or among the lists of professional men. More of them probably entered the ministry than engaged in the practice of law or medicine. They were usually prosperous in business, had the confidence of their fellow citizens, and their full share in town and county offices; but they did not often enlist in the strife for high official stations. I find few merchants in the older families. They disliked trade and chose to live a more quiet, retired life where they could enjoy their love of independence, and communion with nature. Many of them became skillful mechanics. I was suprised to find so many who were blacksmiths, gunsmiths &c., some of whom were very ingenious and able workmen, whose skill in working metals they could not bequeathe to their heirs.

Tradition says that John, the father of Jonathan of Tamworth was a famous hunter. So was Eliphalet, one of the first settlers of Wakefield, and probably his father, Benjamin. When the work on the farm did not demand their attention, they plunged into the forests and hunted. They studied the peculiar habits of wild animals, perhaps taking lessons from the Indians, and so acquired such a knowledge of the habits of wolves, foxes &c. as enabled them to become successful hunters when many others failed in that business. I remember when I was a child hearing the traditional instructions they left for the generations following, but the wolves, bears, beaver and otter had mostly disappeared, and the foxes' skins becoming cheap, scarcely paid for the time it took to hunt them.

Joshua Philbrook of Bath, Me., in a sketch of the life and labors of his grandfather, Joshua[5], son of Jonathan[4] who removed from Greenland to Maine, about the year 1728, gives some interesting facts, which I am glad to copy from the Bath Times, 16 December, 1882. He says, "In the spring of the year 1757, he was up in the wilderness, as was his custom, two months at a time. He took with him traps, a bag of meal, some salt, a gun and ammunition, a blanket strapped on a very light hunter's sled, a pair of snowshoes, a bible in his pocket and a compass, two very important guides. He never set his traps on Saturday, and he was very strict in keeping the Sabbath.* As the spring advanced, he made preparations for returning home, by falling a birch tree for a canoe. These leisure months of spring were so spent in the last years of "the seven years war." At this season they came in contact with no Indians. It was a dangerous but profitable business. By the use of his traps and the sale of his pelts he paid for his farm. Once a year Mr. Philbrook and wife would go to Boston in one of their sloops, and with their pelts buy whatever they needed for the next year, having some years an overplus of a stocking full of silver dollars. Since the hose worn in those days, with breeches, were long, the amount was very convenient, as they became due, to cancel the notes given for the land.

The first kind of lumber shipped to Boston was white oak staves which were sent to wine growing countries to be made into wine puncheons. The next articles sent from the settlements of Long Reach were rift shingles and clapboards, as the time for mills to saw them had not yet come. It is said that the descendants of this early family in Maine "were characterized by dark hair, dark eyes, generally clear complexion, and that they were sober, upright, earnest people."

As an illustration of the dangers attending the hunter in his lonely life, I may relate an anecdote concerning one of this family. He had removed the snow from a small spot of ground and built a sort of shed, enclosed on three sides, and covered with bark and brush to shelter him in the night from falling snow and rain, and he used to build his fire in the open air on the side of his camp not enclosed. Returning one evening from his toilsome trip of hunting the game, he kindled his fire, prepared his frugal meal, aud then retired, with his feet toward the fire, to rest upon a primitive bed of evergreen branches, and soon fell asleep. About midnight he waked, and looking at the fire which had now burned down low, he saw two fiery eyeballs and a ferocious beast glaring at him from the opposite side of the glowing embers. There was no more sleep for him when it seemed that the wild beast intended to make an early breakfast upon human flesh. He gently drew his gun to his face, and aimed it at the animal, so that if it crouched to leap upon him he could shoot. He did not dare commence the battle, lest he should fail to kill the creature, and be wounded himself, or perhaps killed, in the conflict. So they watched each other till just before daybreak, when the wild beast gently walked away and was seen no more. He never knew what the animal was, but supposed it must have been a catamount or American panther, which, when wounded by the hunter proves a very dangerous foe. It has a wide range, being found, it is said, from Canada in the North to Patagonia in the South.

* This family have not forsaken the faith of their fathers. In 1885, Rev. Charles E. Philbrook, son of Joshua of Bath, the writer of the above, was a home missionary in Sierraville, Cal., with a parish some 30 miles long, and his sister is now the faithful helpmate of a city missionary.

In 1861, Samuel S. Philbrick of Andover, great grandson of Jedediah[4] of Kingston, says, "Not one of the Philbricks within the circle of my knowledge has been low and reckless; but generally they have been smart, industrious and intelligent."

Of John M. Philbrook, born at Ossipee in 1807, who died an humble Christian in 1861, it was said, "he was noted for his truthfulness, honesty and industry, so that he was called 'Honest John.'" It is said that when one of his sons who had been to college, and studied law in opposition to the advice of his mother, she remarked, "If all the world were as upright as the Philbrooks there would be no use for lawyers."

Quite a large number of the family have been teachers in common schools and other higher institutions, of whom the late John D. Philbrick, L.L.D., was the most widely known, having been for near twenty years Superintendent of Public Schools in Boston.

Ezekiel Philbrook, brother of Elisha, was long famous as a teacher of common schools, taught more than eighty different terms, some quite long. At a venerable old age he has now retired to his farm in Freeport, Me., and in his last days is gladdened by the knowledge that so many of his numerous offspring have appreciated the value of the instructions he used to give in the school and in the family.

Edwin Philbrook, a graduate of the Illinois Normal School, has taught many years, being professor in the High School at Decatur, Ills., and many others of both sexes have been useful in this occupa ion.
